EXTERNAL JOB POSTING

The Anishinabek Police Service (APS) is a self-administered Indigenous police service in Ontario with a current complement consisting of 106 sworn members and 40 civilian staff. Since 1994, APS has grown to serve over 30,000 people across 16 First Nation communities.

Joining APS—whether as a police officer or civilian staff member—is more than just a job; it's a chance to embrace Indigenous culture, build meaningful community connections, and be a positive role model where it truly counts. Our supportive leadership fosters ongoing training, professional development, and active community involvement. You'll work in some of Ontario's most stunning natural environments, surrounded by forests, lakes, and landscapes that inspire pride and purpose.

In addition to a fulfilling career, APS offers competitive wages, a pension plan, and employer-funded extended health benefits—ensuring your hard work is recognized and well rewarded. Grounded in our Declaration of Principles, APS provides a meaningful and rewarding path where your efforts make a real and lasting difference.
